'Appendix B

In June 2015 I was invited by the Community Safety and Engagement Manager at Preston City Council to an event arranged by the manager of the Foxton Centre in Preston. The event was attended by a cross section of organisations from the Police, housing, social and health in addition to myself as a representative from the Police and Crime Commissioner's office.

Hope for Justice provided a hard hitting message in the training which impacted on all partner agencies. For example – prompting the police to revisit recent intelligence regarding an investigation in a brothel. The Housing associations recognising that accommodation is absolutely key post incident and the concerns raised regarding location of 'safe addresses' and how important the location and duration of these are. In addition it was also recognised that many of these incidents require substantial accommodation if multiple numbers are involved.

Many of these situations involve members of the Eastern European community and the role and numbers of interpreters required.

Since the training there has been the incident in Preston and a full involvement from the OPCC. In attending the de brief issues such as interpreters, available accommodation and roles of other agencies were key. The lessons learned were minimal and this was felt directly attributable to the training received.

In this regard, dialogue has taken place with Sue Swidrak, Hopes for Justice and Supt Sue Cawley – Head of Public Protection Unit in order to further consider the provision of this training across the relevant partner agencies.

There are considerable links to the forthcoming weeks of action including Modern Slavery Week – commencing Sunday 18 October 2015 together with CSE week commencing Sunday 8 November 2015. In addition to these events the Commissioner is opening the Business Crime Event to be held on 10 November 2015. All of these events present opportunity to widen the awareness that human trafficking/modern slavery can be present in circumstances not originally considered.

Hope for Justice are working with a number of police forces at present supporting Police Investigation Teams in Bradford and the West Midlands and in respect of West Yorkshire, the Police and Crime Commissioner Mark Burns-Williams has committed to supporting this team and engendered support from other PCCs to share best practice.

Hope for Justice are currently working for the Office of the Police and Crime Commissioner for Cleveland Police and have been conducting training sessions across their partner agencies, each session is targeted at circa 50 people and they had an initial start up of 5 sessions at a cost of £500 each. It is likely that the sessions will be half a day in duration but the best practice sharing/networking would take place during a lunch.

Session + tea, coffee & biscuits together light lunch (b)	£900	£4500
Session + tea, coffee & biscuits together with light lunch (c)	£1014	£5070

Recommendation

In view of the very positive effects viewed to arise from the networking opportunities during coffee breaks and a working lunch the sessions that include a lunch are recommended and would suggest option b as the most appropriate option. It is also anticipated that one or two further sessions may be required dependent on availability of attendees.
